He lives in the Washington, D.C. area with his wife and two daughters.

Ambassador Craig Dunkerley – Advisory Board

Ambassador (retired) Craig Dunkerley was a career member of the Senior Foreign Service for over three decades, and since retirement in 2003 has been a Distinguished Adjunct Professor at the Near East South Asia Center for Strategic Studies at the National Defense University.

As the Secretary of State's Special Envoy for Conventional Armed Forces in Europe (CFE) from 1997 through 2001, he led both the U.S. negotiating effort to adapt the CFE Treaty, signed at the Istanbul OSCE Summit in 1999, and a subsequent diplomatic campaign to facilitate the staged withdrawal of Russian military forces from Georgia and Moldova. He was confirmed by the U.S. Senate with the rank of Ambassador in this capacity.

In the mid-90's, he served as Director of the Office of European Security and Political Affairs. In the early 90's he served in Vienna as Deputy Chief of Mission of the newly-formed U.S. Mission to the OSCE. In the late 80's he served in Brussels as Political Counselor to the U.S. Mission to NATO. In the 70's, he served as Principal officer at the U.S. Consulate in Fukuoka, Japan; as Political Officer at the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo; and as Vice Consul in DaNang, Vietnam during the final years of the Vietnam War.

A graduate of Amherst College and the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Ambassador Dunkerley entered the Foreign Service in 1971. Over his career, he has received numerous awards from the Department of State.

Walter Russell Mead – Advisory Board

Mr. Mead is the Henry A. Kissinger senior fellow for U.S. foreign policy at the Council on Foreign Relations and one of the country's leading students of American foreign policy. His book, Special Providence: American Foreign Policy and How It Changed the World (Alfred A. Knopf, 2004), was widely hailed by reviewers, historians, and diplomats as an important study that will change the way Americans and others think about American foreign policy. Among several honors and prizes, Special Providence received the Lionel Gelber Award for the best book in English on international relations in 2002. The Italian translation won the Premio Acqui Storia, awarded to the most important historical book published in Italian.

His most recent book, God and Gold: Britain, America and the Making of the Modern World (Alfred A. Knopf, 2007), is a major study of 400 years of conflict between Anglophone powers and rivals ranging from absolute monarchies like Spain and France through Communist and Fascist enemies in the twentieth century to al-Qaeda today.

Mr. Mead writes regularly on international affairs for the Los Angeles Times, New York Times, Wall Street Journal, International Herald Tribune, Washington Post, Financial Times, Foreign Affairs, New Yorker, Atlantic, Harper's, and Esquire. He serves as a regular reviewer of books for Foreign Affairs and frequently appears on national and international radio and television programs. In 1997, he was a finalist for the National Magazine Award in the category of essays and criticism.

Mr. Mead's chief intellectual interests involve the rise and development of a liberal, capitalist world order based on the economic, social, and military power of the United States and its closest allies. He is interested in the implications of this evolving world order for American foreign policy and for American and international society.

He is an honors graduate of Groton and Yale, where he received prizes for history, debate, and the translation of New Testament Greek. He has traveled widely in the Middle East, Asia, Europe, Africa, and Latin America, and often speaks at conferences in the United States and abroad. He is a founding board member of the New America Foundation. He is a native of South Carolina and lives in Jackson Heights, New York.

Frances Fragos Townsend, a Partner with Baker Botts, served as Assistant to President George W. Bush for Homeland Security and Counterterrorism and chaired the Homeland Security Council from May 2004 until January 2008. She previously served as Deputy Assistant to the President and Deputy National Security Advisor for Combating Terrorism from May 2003 to May 2004. Most recently, Ms. Townsend provided consulting services and advice to corporate entities on Global Strategic Engagement and Risk as well as Crisis and Contingency planning. Ms. Townsend is a contributor for CNN and has regularly appeared on network and cable television as a counterterrorism, national and homeland security expert. She has received numerous awards for her public service accomplishments.

Prior to serving the President, Ms. Townsend was the first Assistant Commandant for Intelligence for the U. S. Coast Guard. Before that, Ms. Townsend spent 13 years at the U. S. Department of Justice under the administrations of President George H. W. Bush, President Bill Clinton and President George W. Bush. She served in a variety of senior positions including Counsel to the Attorney General for Intelligence Policy. Ms. Townsend began her prosecutorial career in 1985, serving as an Assistant District Attorney in Brooklyn, New York.

In 1988, she joined the United States Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York where she focused on international organized crime and white-collar crime cases. In 1991, she worked in the Office of the Attorney General to assist in establishing the newly created Office of International Programs, the predecessor to the Executive Office for National Security. In December 1993, she joined the Criminal Division where she served as Chief of Staff to the Assistant Attorney General and played a critical part in establishing the Division's international training and rule of law programs.

From November of 1995 to November of 1997, Ms. Townsend was Director of the Office of International Affairs in the Criminal Division, which serves as the U. S. Central Authority for extradition and mutual legal assistance, and works with the Department of State in the negotiation of international law enforcement treaties. In November of 1997, Ms. Townsend was appointed as Acting Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, where she oversaw international law enforcement and training matters in the Criminal Division, and acted as an advisor to the Attorney General and Deputy Attorney General on international law enforcement policy.

In March of 1998, Ms. Townsend was appointed Counsel for Intelligence Policy, managing matters related to national security policy and operations for the Department of Justice. In this capacity she headed the office of Intelligence Policy and Review, an office that provides legal advice and recommendations to the Attorney General and the Department of Justice regarding national security matters, reviews executive orders, directives and procedures relating to the intelligence community and approves certain intelligence-gathering activities, especially those matters related to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act.

Ambassador Jackie Wolcott – Advisory Board

Jackie Wolcott was appointed as Special Envoy for Nuclear Nonproliferation at the request of the Secretary of State in February 2008. In this capacity she represented the United States with counterpart governments and U.S. industry to develop international cooperation that supports civil nuclear power expansion globally while reducing risks of nuclear proliferation, consistent with the Joint Declaration on Nuclear Energy and Nonproliferation announced by Presidents Bush and Putin in 2007. Prior to this appointment, she served since February, 2006 as U.S. Ambassador to the UN Security Council handling the full range of international security issues before the Council.

Ms. Wolcott also was Ambassador and United States Permanent Representative to the Conference on Disarmament in Geneva and as Special Representative of the President of the United States for the Non-Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons from December 2003 through February of 2006. In the latter capacity she had lead responsibility for U.S. participation in the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty (NPT) review process. Ambassador Wolcott was also accredited as U.S. Governor and head of delegation to the International Atomic Energy Agency Board of Governors in Vienna for its September 2004 through June 2005 quarterly Board meetings.

Prior to this, she served as Deputy Assistant Secretary of State in the Bureau of International Organization Affairs from 2001 to 2003, with broad responsibility for foreign policy development and multilateral negotiations within the United Nations system. She also served as Deputy Assistant Secretary of State in this same Bureau from 1990 to 1993. Ambassador Wolcott served for more than 20 years in the federal government, including nine years on Capitol Hill (Senate and House). She held several additional positions relating to national security affairs, including Associate Director for National Security in the Office of Presidential Personnel, The White House; White House Liaison for the Department of State; and Special Assistant for Congressional Affairs in the Bureau of Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs, Department of State.

Dr. Amy Westbrook – Advisory Board

Amy Westbrook is Co-Director of the Business and Transactional Law Center and Associate Professor at Washburn University School of Law in Topeka, Kansas. She previously taught at the University at Buffalo Law School, State University of New York, where she was Director of the New York City Program in International Finance and Law.

Professor Westbrook's scholarship focuses on the intersection of financial regulation and international issues, particularly security issues. Her current research and publications concern the application of the disclosure requirements of the U.S. securities laws to companies doing business in Iran and other states designated as sponsors of terrorism. She also conducts research on the enforcement of the U.S. Foreign Corrupt Practices Act and the regulation of international business transactions.

Prior to entering academe, Professor Westbrook practiced at Cleary, Gottlieb, Steen and Hamilton in Washington, D.C., where her work included project finance, joint venture and other cross-border transactions, as well as providing advice with respect to U.S. sanctions programs.

A native of Miami, Florida, she is a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School.

Dr. Gary Milhollin – Advisory Board

Since 1985, Professor Gary Milhollin has directed the Wisconsin Project on Nuclear Arms Control, which carries out research and public education designed to halt the spread of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction. The Wisconsin Project operates in Washington, D.C. under the auspices of the University of Wisconsin, where Professor Milhollin was a member of the law faculty from 1976 to 1998.

One of the Wisconsin Project's goals has been to discover and publicize exports that could help countries develop mass destruction weapons, and to highlight the weaknesses in international agreements or national laws that allow such exports to happen. Through its research reports, articles and work with the press, the Project has influenced the export policies of major industrial nations. The Project publishes Iranwatch.org, a comprehensive web site that tracks Iran's ability to produce weapons of mass destruction. It also publishes the Risk Report Database, which several U.S. federal agencies and some 35 foreign countries use to control the export of dangerous technologies.

Professor Milhollin has practiced international corporate law in New York and Paris, has served as an Administrative Judge, part time, at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, has taught courses on nuclear arms proliferation at Princeton University as well as the University of Wisconsin, and has been a consultant on nuclear non-proliferation to the Department of Defense. He testifies frequently before Congress and his research has appeared in publications such as the New Yorker, the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal and the Washington Post. Professor Milhollin is interviewed, cited and quoted widely in the international press.
